FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Perhaps no vegetable so rarely appears upon our table as the Jerusalem artichoke. Except in a few gardens this plant is not grown for human consumption, and in but few markets is it offered regularly for sale. Yet when properly managed by the gardener and the cook, it is as delicate a dish as the choicest cauliflower or sweet corn.

Its cultivation is similar to and even atmpler than that of potatoes. For a home garden an area 20 feet square in an out of the way corner, where the sail is fairly rich, moist and light, should give an ample supply for a large family. The plants will take care of themselves year after year with no attention save in the way of an occasional fertilization. The only important point to be observed is to dig no more than are needed for a dish, and these as near to the time they are to be cooked as convenient. Unless freshly dug artichokes are not what this article claims for them-delicate and delicious. If out of the ground longer than two days, except they be stored in pits, they will be very poor. Freezing does not injure them while they are in the ground. It rather improves them. Many a time the writer has dug them with a pickax in midwinter. They are then at their

To prepare them for the table, wash and peel the tubers and boil gently for about 20 minutes. When done, drain them carefully in a colander. After thorough draining, serve with melted butter or a cream sauce prepared as follows; Mince a small onion and a carrot and heat in a stewpan with about two ounces of butter until the butter is nearly dried up. Then stir in two or three tablespoonfuls of flour mixed with milk and finally about a pint of milk. Season to taste, strain and serve. This sauce needs about 15 minutes to cook. Parsley or other herbs may take the place of carrot and onion.-What to Eat.

Census Returns Show a Decrease o Nearly 20,000 Since 1890. According to a bulletin just issued at Washington by the census bureau, in the ten years from 1890 to 1900 there was a diminution in the Chinese population of the United States of nearly 20,000. The cause of this decrease is not given, but by some it is attribute ! to the strict enforcement of the Chinese exclusion law and is used as an argument for an extension of that stat-ute, says the Philadelphia Press. On the other hand, the Japanese have increased their population in the United States by nearly 22,000 during the dec-
